

3rd edition

Organizational behaviour and work

a critical introduction

Fiona M. Wilson

OXFORD
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Detailed contents

Introduction	1
<hr/>
Section 1 Approaching Management Critically	11
Chapter 1 Setting the Scene	13
Introduction	13
Some scene-setting issues	13
Globalization	14
Human trafficking and modern-day slavery	15
The growth of the enterprise economy	16
Trends in the working population	16
Income and social mobility	20
Men and women working	21
Men, women, and management	22
Mothers' and fathers' attitudes to work and family	23
Working hours	24
Part-time working	25
Homeworking	25
Other scene-setting issues	26
Chapter 2 The View from Below	35
Introduction	35
Alienation	35
The experience of the assembly line	37
Making work manageable	38
The experience of the call centre	39
Class and orientation to work	40
What work means	42
Measuring meaning	44
Job redesign to improve the intrinsic meaning of work	45
Class, gender, and the meaning of work	46
More 'not so good' and 'unskilled' low-paid jobs	48
Doing 'dirty work'	48
The experience of catering work	50
Working-class kids, working-class jobs, and the case of care assistants	51
The experience of homeworking	52
Conclusion	53

Chapter 3	The View from Above	62
	Introduction	62
	The definition of 'management'	62
	Research on the role of the manager	63
	Management as a profession	69
	Middle management	70
	Success in management	70
	Management and men	71
	The reality for the woman manager	71
	'Double jeopardy': The reality for the black and ethnic minority woman manager	72
	Hotel management	72
	Surprises in managerial work	73
	Standing back from managerial work	73
	Conclusion	74
Chapter 4	The Rationality of Management	81
	Introduction	81
	Early management thinkers and rationality	82
	The rationale of scientific management and Taylorism	82
	Henry Ford	85
	Routinization, the detailed division of labour, and modern-day Taylorism	86
	The rationale of the human relations movement	88
	Job redesign	91
	The rationale of fitting workers to jobs	91
	Eugenics	92
	Intelligence testing	93
	Vocational guidance: Testing, then fitting people to jobs	94
	Conclusion	95
Chapter 5	Sexuality, Sex Typing, and Gender	101
	Introduction	101
	Sexuality in organizations	101
	The sex typing of male and female jobs	102
	The sex stereotype and emotional labour	104
	Masculinity and managing feelings	107
	Feeling in control	108
	Accounting for emotion	110
	Organizational romance	110
	Sexual harassment	111
	Conclusion	112
Section 2 Classic Organizational Behaviour and the Critique		121
Chapter 6	Motivation	123
	Introduction	123
	Motivation as a problem	123
	Content theories of motivation	124

Process theories of motivation	131
Some further thoughts on motivation	134
Job satisfaction and positive outcomes for organizations	135
Conclusion	135
Chapter 7 Leadership	143
Introduction	143
Thinking about leadership	143
A trait theory of leadership	145
Style theories and democratic leadership	146
Task- versus relations-oriented leadership	148
Consideration versus initiating structure	149
Transactional versus transformational leadership	150
Situational leadership	151
Emotion and leadership	152
Gender and leadership	153
Spirituality and leadership	154
Race and leadership	155
Class and leadership	156
Conclusion	156
Chapter 8 Perception	164
Introduction	164
The study of perception	165
Gestalt psychology and perception	166
Attribution theory	167
Conformity	167
Implicit personality theory	169
The logical error	169
Stereotypes and prejudice	170
The distortion of perception	172
The halo effect	173
Frames and their effect on perception	174
Classifications and their consequences	176
Perceptions of employers by employees and the psychological contract	176
Self-perception	177
Further ways in which perception can be shaped	178
Conclusion	178
Chapter 9 Personality	185
Introduction	185
Personality and personality theory	185
Personality traits and tests	187
Intelligence testing and personality	188
Emotional intelligence and psychometric testing	189
Some difficulties with measuring and testing personality	190
Personality theory and problematic behaviour	192
Personality, integrity, and dishonesty at work	193

Judging competence at work	194
Personality and leadership	195
Is looking at personality traits enough?	195
Conclusion	196
Chapter 10 Organizational Learning	202
Introduction	202
The concept of organizational learning	202
Individual learning	203
Group learning	206
Organizational learning	207
Learning about language in organizations	211
Developing a critical consciousness	212
Conclusion	213
Chapter 11 Culture	218
Introduction	218
The concept of culture	218
Understanding culture	219
Do the 'best' cultures lead to 'best' performance?	220
Critically assessing whether culture can be managed	221
National and organizational cultures	223
Some problems with trying to manage culture	224
Describing (rather than prescribing) culture	224
Culture and change	228
Culture and gender	230
Culture and race	234
Other aspects of culture	234
Conclusion	235
Chapter 12 Teams and Teamworking	242
Introduction	242
Teamwork and teamworking	242
Popular views of teamworking	243
A historical view of teamworking	246
Making claims about teamworking	249
Teamworking and gender	252
Conclusion	252
Chapter 13 Structure	259
Introduction	259
Weber on bureaucracy	260
The advantages of bureaucracy	261
The unintended consequences and dysfunctions of bureaucracy	262
Bureaucracy, emotion, and gender	263
Rationality and the service sector	264

The case of McDonald's	266
McDonaldization	268
Organizational variation in structure	270
Conclusion	272
Chapter 14 All Change?	278
Introduction	278
New forms of organization	278
Change in organizations	280
Technology and change	283
The knowledge economy and knowledge workers	284
New organizations?	286
The Japanese model	287
Change—or continuity?	292
Conclusion	292
<hr/>
Section 3 The Core of Critical Approaches	299
Chapter 15 Managerial Power and Control	301
Introduction	301
The sources and definition of 'power'	301
Managerial prerogative	303
Workers' power	304
Managing to empower	307
Control and surveillance	309
Technology	311
Technology and surveillance	313
Business process engineering	314
Conclusion	315
Chapter 16 Organizational Misbehaviour	322
Introduction	322
Resistance and organizational misbehaviour	322
Cheating, fraud, and theft	323
Virtual crime	326
Swearing	326
Swindling	327
Lying	327
Denial	328
Bullying	329
Sabotage	331
Struggles relating to time	332
Gossip	332
Fun	333
Managing organizational misbehaviour	334
Conclusion	335

Chapter 17	Voluntary and Alternative Organizations	343
	Introduction	343
	Voluntary work	343
	Cooperatives	344
	The Israeli kibbutz	349
	Yugoslav self-management	349
	Employee involvement: profit sharing and share ownership	350
	Conclusion	352
Chapter 18	Health, Well-being, Emotion, and Stress	357
	Introduction	357
	Violence and abuse	357
	Stress	358
	The management of emotions	363
	Being unemployed	364
	Being 'on the fiddle' or working 'on the side'	368
	'Non-work'	369
	Conclusion	369
	Glossary	377
	Index	381